Florida Sugar Cane League applauds President Trump's request for disaster aid

"After experiencing historically bad freezes in February that harmed most of Florida's agriculture, the Florida Sugar Cane League is extremely grateful that President Trump continues to stand with America's farmers by requesting that Congress provide disaster aid to Florida's farmers. Florida's sugarcane farmers and employees grow and mill cane in Florida, and operate refineries across the U.S.," stated Ryan Weston, the CEO of the Florida Sugar Cane League. "President Trump has worked nonstop to help us keep making real sugar in America. And thanks to the Florida delegation for fighting for Florida's farmers."

The Florida Sugar Cane League's members grow sugarcane in Florida and operate refineries in Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, New York, and California.
